

Deputy Chief Justice Nguyen Bien Thuy Lectures Students at VNU University of Law

On the afternoon of 12 May 2026, VNU University of Law held a specialized lecture on civil procedure law from a practical perspective, with Nguyen Bien Thuy, Deputy Chief Justice of the Supreme People's Court, as the speaker.

In his lecture, Nguyen Bien Thuy focused on current difficulties in court procedure and the application of law, covering the following main points:

- Procedure is not merely a formal requirement but a key tool for establishing the objective facts of a case.
- Clarifying the legality, objectivity and relevance of modern sources of evidence, such as electronic data, audio and video recordings.
- Analyzing the legal value of notarized records (vi bằng) and party admissions in the process of proof.
- Applying supplementary principles: where no specific legal provision exists, judges may rely on custom, analogy, precedent and equity to resolve disputes and ensure access to justice.
- Mediation mechanisms: flexibly combining mediation law, court-based dialogue and procedural mediation to optimize outcomes for the parties.
- Court digital transformation: expanding electronic court models while retaining traditional methods for vulnerable parties to preserve a humane approach.

The talk offered practitioners sharp legal analysis, helping them better identify issues that arise in the course of adjudication.
